DETAILED ACTION

This action is in response to papers filed on July 2, 2007.

1. An examiner's amendment to the record appears below. Should the changes and/or additions be unacceptable to applicant, an amendment may be filed as provided by 37 CFR 1.312. To ensure consideration of such an amendment, it MUST be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee.

Authorization for this examiner's amendment was given in a telephone interview with Hunter Webb on Friday, September 13, 2007.

The application has been amended as follows:

Claim 1. (Currently Amended) A method for routing hardcopy mail, comprising:

providing a unique identifier for a recipient, in response to entry of a mailing address of a recipient in a routing system electronically associating mailing address, provided by the recipient, with the identifier in {{a }} the routing system, the mailing address comprising all information necessary for routing the hardcopy mail to a physical location of the recipient;

providing the identifier to a sender for affixing to a piece of hardcopy mail in lieu of the mailing address in response to a search by the sender for the identifier in the routing system; retrieving the associated mailing address corresponding to the identifier from a referencing system of the routing system by a postal machine system, the retrieving using only the identifier; and routing the piece of hardcopy mail to the recipient at the most current associated mailing address, wherein the retrieving obviates a request to a computer.

Claim 8. (Currently Amended) A method for routing hardcopy mail, comprising:

providing a unique identifier for a recipient; in response to entry of a mailing address of a recipient in a routing system electronically associating {a} the mailing address, provided by the recipient, with the identifier in {a} the routing system, the mailing address comprising all information necessary for routing the hardcopy mail to a physical location of the recipient;

providing the identifier to a sender for affixing to a piece of hardcopy mail in lieu of the mailing address and submitting the piece of hardcopy mail to a machine; where in response to a search by the sender for the identifier in the routing system;

retrieving the mailing address corresponding to the identifier from a referencing system of the routing system to the machine, using only the identifier; and providing the most current mailing address to the machine, wherein the machine can read the identifier and route the piece of hardcopy mail to the recipient at the associated mailing address and wherein the retrieving obviates a request to a computer.

Claim 16. (Currently Amended) A method for routing hardcopy mail, comprising the:

providing a unique identifier for a recipient; in response to entry of a mailing address of a recipient in a routing system

electronically associating {a} the mailing address, provided by the recipient, with the identifier in {a} the routing system, the mailing address comprising all information necessary for routing the hardcopy mail to a location of the recipient;

providing the identifier to a sender for affixing to a piece of hardcopy mail in lieu of the mailing address in response to a search by the sender for the identifier in the routing system;

electronically editing the associated mailing address; electronically associating the edited mailing address with the identifier; and sending the edited mailing address to a machine through a referencing system of the routing system by retrieving the edited mailing address using only the identifier, wherein the machine can read the identifier and route the piece of hardcopy mail to the recipient at the edited mailing address and wherein the retrieving obviates a request to a computer.

2. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

3. Claims 1, 8, 16 20, 28 and 33 disclose method system and product for receiving a mailing address from a recipient in a routing system and assigning a unique identifier for the recipient. Electronically associating the identifier with the mailing address that the recipient entered in the routing system. The identifier is then provided to a sender who searches the recipient in the routing system. The sender then affixes the identifier to a hard copy piece of mail. The recipient is then able to edit the mailing address associated with the identifier, the edited mailing address is send to a machine through a referencing system to route the piece of mail to the recipient which obviates a request to a computer.

4. The prior art does not teach or suggest three important limitations of the above noted claims. The prior art fails to teach the sender searching the routing system and receiving the recipient identifier. The prior art further fails to teach the postal machine search a routing system to retrieve the address of the identifier.

5. US Patent Couch et al 7130803 Unique virtual dynamically-capable addressing system and method of mail and parcel delivery and forwarding.

6. Couch fails to teach the sender the ability to search the routing system to retrieve the recipients address identifier along with the postal machine requesting the mailing address from the routing system when routing the mail to the recipient.

7. Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance"
